I was surprised by how funny this book was for the first half or so. Contamination controls when preparing archaeological remains for ancient DNA analysis. As it was reasonable to assume that all the different lines of evidence were independent, the joint likelihood of all the evidence was obtained by multiplication of the individual likelihoods under each hypothesis.

Separate ancient samples were processed in separate lab to replicate results.

Oh, I will dispute the tower bones, but that's a topic too long for a reply. Mystery solved: the identification of the the two missing Romanov children using DNA analysis.

All of the pages are intact and the cover is intact and the spine may show signs of wear.

historical records of female-line lineages are usually more difficult to track over multiple generations due to the change of surname on marriage. Everyone involved in the excavation at the Grey Friars site, the clean laboratory in Leicester and those involved in the laboratories and labwork had their mitochondrial and, for males, Y-chromosomes typed.
