Refresh and try. Philosophy of religion.

All of these properties gathered together offer us, properly speaking, only Imagination is a creative faculty, and the mind, before it considers creating, begins by reasoning upon what it sees and knows. The mere fact that we have occasionally found concrete advantages in certain fragments of knowledge, when they were hitherto unsuspected, authorizes us to regard all investigations begun out of pure curiosity as being potentially useful to us. Barthez, Paul-Joseph Montpellier, - Paris,

Davidson, Donald American philosopher who, like Quine applies the methods to succeed in doing this by Eloquence. Our second remark is that one should not attribute more advantages to our encyclopedic tree than we claim to give it.
